Homepage FAQ Set (8 questions)

Q. What is Maverick Business Academy?

Maverick Business Academy helps students and working professionals explore programmes and navigate applications through partner universities and awarding organisations. The portfolio includes undergraduate, postgraduate, research and professional diploma routes. The exact award, delivery arrangements and support depend on the programme, so use an eligibility review to understand the offer that fits your goals.

Q. How does Maverick work with its partner universities?

Maverick provides programme and application guidance around partner-delivered awards. The awarding institution and each organisation's responsibilities should be identified in your offer, including teaching, assessment, registration and student support. An institution's accreditation does not automatically cover every partner route; check the programme-specific arrangements before enrolling.

Q. Which types of programmes can I study through Maverick?

The supplied portfolio spans several qualification levels:

- Bachelor's degrees, including routes that may recognise prior learning
- MBA, Executive MBA, MSc and LLM study, including a linked Global MBA pathway
- Doctoral research routes
- Professional diplomas at Levels 3, 5 and 7
- Educational travel through Maverick Edutainment

Current availability and entry conditions depend on the chosen offer. Moving between levels is subject to the next programme's requirements.

Q. Can I study with Maverick from anywhere in the world?

Maverick welcomes enquiries from students worldwide, and online routes can support study from where you live and work. Availability still depends on the programme's admissions, delivery and attendance rules. Blended learning can include in-person commitments; confirm the actual route, schedule and any access restrictions before assuming that relocation or travel will never be required.

Q. Who actually awards the degree or diploma I receive?

The awarding university or organisation should be named in your programme offer. For the partner qualifications in this portfolio, confirm the exact award title and issuer, particularly where a pathway includes more than one credential. Teaching support, recruitment and awarding responsibilities can differ; ask how your final award can be verified directly with its issuer.

Q. How do I choose the right programme for my goals?

Start with your existing qualifications, experience and intended next step. Share these with the advisory team and compare programmes by subject, entry criteria, study commitment, total cost and awarding arrangements. If you need a qualification for further study or a regulated profession, check the receiving organisation's requirements before you decide.

Q. Are the programmes accredited and recognised?

Recognition and accreditation must be checked for the exact programme and purpose. Institutional status, programme accreditation and regulated-diploma approval are different things; one does not automatically establish the others. Ask for the awarding body and current programme-specific evidence, then check acceptance with the relevant employer, professional body or receiving university before relying on it.

Q. What support will I get from enquiry to graduation?

Confirm the support included at each stage of your chosen programme. Ask about programme guidance, eligibility and documentation help before enrolment, then academic, technical and assessment support during study. If careers or graduation services are important to you, check who provides them and their scope. Support commitments should be clear in the offer rather than assumed across all partners.

Programme availability, fees and entry requirements are confirmed for the selected route and intake before enrolment and may change.

Edutainment - Educational Tours FAQs

Learning objectives, participants and travel arrangements | 10 questions

Edutainment FAQ Set (10 questions)

Q. What is Maverick Edutainment?

Maverick Edutainment designs educational travel programmes that combine learning with experience - academic visits, industry exposure, cultural immersion and recreation, built around defined learning objectives. It turns a school or university trip into a structured learning experience students actually remember.

Q. How is an Edutainment programme different from a normal school tour?

Edutainment puts agreed learning objectives at the centre of the itinerary. Sightseeing and recreation may still be included, but visits and activities are selected to support academic exposure, professional insight or cultural understanding. School tours can also be educational; the useful comparison is the structure, activities and documented objectives of the actual proposal.

Q. Who can take part in an Edutainment programme?

Edutainment proposals can be designed for school, college and university groups, as well as professionals and educational institutions. Suitability depends on participants' age, the activities and the institution's requirements. Confirm age limits, accessibility needs and accompanying-adult arrangements before selecting an itinerary; not every programme is suitable for every group.

Q. What kinds of experiences are included?

Depending on the destination and package, a journey can include four experience layers:

- Academic - campus visits, workshops, subject-linked learning sessions
- Professional - industry visits and real workplace exposure
- Cultural - heritage, local life and cross-cultural understanding
- Recreational - enjoyment and bonding that make the learning stick

Q. How are safety and supervision handled?

Safety and supervision arrangements should be agreed in writing before booking. Ask for the activity risk assessment, adult supervision arrangements, emergency contacts, medical procedures and insurance responsibilities. Institutions and families should understand who is responsible at each stage. The exact arrangements must match the participants and itinerary; specific ratios or safety procedures should not be assumed.

Q. Can the programme be customised to our curriculum or a specific subject?

Yes - customisation is the point. Institutions can request itineraries built around a subject, department or learning goal (business, science, culture, language and more), and the programme is planned backwards from those objectives, including pre-trip briefings where useful.

Q. What is included in the package - and are flights included?

Inclusions depend on the selected package and must be stated in the written proposal. They may include activities, entrance tickets, local transport, accommodation and meals. Flights may be included or excluded. Check the exclusions, optional activities and any additional charges before approving the budget rather than assuming that every package covers the same services.

Q. Do students receive certificates or documented learning outcomes?

Certificates may be included for selected programmes, subject to confirmation in the proposal. Ask who issues the certificate, what it records and whether learning objectives or activity outcomes will also be documented. Participation evidence should not be described as academic credit or a formal qualification unless a separately verified awarding arrangement provides that.

Q. How far in advance should we plan, and how do we get a proposal?

Contact the team early enough for institutional approval and travel planning. Share your group size, participant ages, learning objectives, preferred travel window and budget so a suitable proposal can be prepared. Ask for the recommended lead time and proposal schedule for your itinerary; availability and costs are confirmed through the written proposal, not guaranteed by an initial enquiry.

Q. Is help available with visas and travel documentation?

Travel-document guidance or coordination may be available, depending on the selected package and destination. Ask what help is included and what each traveller must arrange. Visa approval is decided solely by the relevant authority; guidance from the programme team does not guarantee a visa or entry permission.

Programme availability, inclusions and pricing are confirmed in each institution's written proposal and may vary by destination and season.
